Title: Los Angeles Times Poll: California Politics

Survey Organizations: Los Angeles Times

Field Dates: October 20 - 23, 1992

Sample: Adult residents of California

Sample Size: 1354

Interview Modes: Telephone Interview

Weight Location: Card 1, Columns 2-6 (xx.xxx)

Usage Notes: Some questions, which use only 1 column for data, allow legitimate punches for 10 & 11.
10 will correspond to 'X' in the data file and 11 will correspond to 'Y' in the data file.

Please note that data provided by the Roper Center for Public Opinion Research may not be re-disseminated without written permission. The results of any analyses conducted on the data may, however, be published with appropriate acknowledgments and source citation.

This Los Angeles Times poll is the 301st in a series of opinion studies designed to measure public attitudes on a number of critical issues. This particular survey focuses on California politics and the presidential and senate races just prior to the national general election.

The sampling frame for this survey is all telephone residences in the state of California. One thousand three hundred fifty-four men and women 18 years of age or older were contacted by telephone October 20-23, 1992. The sample includes 1,110 registered voters and 833 likely voters. Results are adjusted to conform with census figures on characteristics such as sex, age, race, education and household size. Telephone numbers were generated from a computer list that includes all telephone exchanges in the state. Interviewing was conducted in either English or Spanish. Random-digit dialing techniques were used to ensure that both listed and unlisted residences have an opportunity to be contacted.

Readers are reminded that, since survey research normally questions only a small proportion of the population, one must allow a certain margin for error. The margin of sampling error for the total sample and the sample of registered voter is plus or minus three percentage points. The sampling error for likely voters is four percentage points. Each of the ballot initiative questions was asked of roughly half of the total sample of registered voters. The margin of error for these samples is plus or minus five percentage points. The error margin for certain other subgroups maybe somewhat higher.

Surveys of this kind are sometimes subject to different kinds of inaccuracies for which precise estimates cannot be calculated and which may, in some cases, be even larger than the effects associated with sampling procedures. For example, findings may be influenced by events which take place while the survey is in the field and, of course, events occurring since the time the interviews were conducted could have changed the opinions reported here. Undetected flaws in the way the sampling and interviewing procedure were carried out could have a significant effect on the findings. Changing the wording of questions and the sequence in which they are asked can produce different results. Sometimes questions are inadvertently biased or misleading. And people who responded to the survey may not necessarily replicate the views of those who refused to be interviewed or who could not be found at home during the time the survey was conducted. Moreover, while every precaution has been taken to make these findings completely accurate, other errors may have resulted from the various practical difficulties associated with taking any survey of public opinion.

The Los Angeles Times Poll is directed by John Brennan, under the general supervision of Assistant Managing Editor Martin Baron. Susan Pinkus is the assistant director, Roger Richardson is the field supervisor, Jill Milburn is the systems analyst and Claudia Vaughn is the data coordinator.

55. As you may know, if passed, Proposition 161 would allow a terminally ill, mentally competent adult the right to voluntarily request and receive a physician's help to die. Supporters say the measure allows a suffering terminally ill patient a dignified, safe and legal method of dying while providing legal protection to physicians who agree to assist. Doctors could not be forced to participate and it would be a crime to pressure a patient to make the choice. Opponents say that the measure doesn't require a waiting period during which a patient might change their mind. It also doesn't take into account a possible misdiagnosis by a doctor and doesn't require a psychological evaluation for the patient.

If the November general election were being held today, would you vote in favor of Proposition 161 or would you vote against it? I will be happy to read the pro and con arguments again. 57. As you may know, if passed, Proposition 164 would prevent a person from being placed on the California ballot as a candidate for another term if that person had already served 12 of the previous 17 years as a Senator or 6 of the previous 11 years as a U.S. Representative. Supporters say congressional incumbents are too powerful and dominate the reelection process through their fundraising advantages. Limiting their terms will help new types of people with new ideas get into the Congress while weakening the hold of special interests and lobbyists. Opponents say California will end up with low-ranking members in Congress who can't compete for federal dollars against senior members from other states. They also say the measure does nothing to restrict the special interest money which will continue to flow into campaigns no matter who is running.

59. As you may know, if passed, Proposition 165 would give California's governor increased constitutional powers to control and reduce state spending by declaring a fiscal emergency if the state budget is not passed on time. It would also cap cost-of-living adjustments on state welfare programs, cut many welfare benefits by up to 25 percent and limit welfare payments for new state residents.

Those in favor of Proposition 165 say it provides the Governor needed powers to provide the state with a balanced budget if there is legislative gridlock in Sacramento. They also say California pays more in welfare benefits than many other states and those costs are damaging the state's economy. Those opposed say that the measure shifts too much power over the budget and state spending from the legislature to the governor. They also say the measure would simply deprive poor families of needed welfare benefits without providing the job creation, training and childcare needed to help them get off welfare. If the November general election were being held today, would you vote in favor of Proposition 165 or would you vote against it? I will be happy to read the pro and con arguments again. 61. As you may know, if passed, Proposition 166 would require all employers to provide a basic package of health care coverage to employees working a minimum number of hours. Employers would pay at least 75 percent of the insurance premium for each employee; an employee's contribution would not exceed 2 percent of their wages. It also prohibits insurance companies from refusing coverage to a person because of a preexisting disease, and imposes cost containment measures on doctors and hospitals. Small businesses would be able to deduct up to 25 percent of the costs they incur from providing the insurance from their taxes.

Supporters say this measure would go a long way toward providing health insurance to the 5 million people in California working families who currently have no benefits. They also say it would stop insurance companies from seeking to insure only healthy persons. Opponents say the employers will simply get around the law by cutting staff and reducing the numbers of hours employees work below the minimum required for insurance. They also say the measure lacks the real, effective cost cutting measures needed for health care system reform.

63. As you may know, if passed, Proposition 167 would make various changes in the state's tax laws, including increasing state tax rates for high-income people, increasing tax rates for corporations, banks, insurance companies and oil producers, repealing the 1991 sales tax increase and restoring the renter's tax credit for all renters. Supporters say high-income people and corporations don't pay their fair share of taxes in California and that this measure would make them pay more while providing tax relief to middle and lower income people.

Opponents say increasing corporate taxes will make businesses leave the state, will cost jobs and will end up hurting middle and lower income people since corporations will pass the tax increases along to the consumer.
