Survey Methodology

The survey was designed and conducted by Public Religion Research Institute and made possible through generous funding from the Ford Foundation, the Nathan Cummings Foundation, and the Civic Engagement Research Fund at the New World Foundation. Results of the survey were based on 1,410 callback telephone interviews with respondents from the pre-election American Values Survey that was fielded in late September 2012 among a national random sample of 3,003 adults 18 years of age or older in the continental United States. For the post-election survey, telephone interviews were conducted in both Spanish and English between November 7, 2012 and November 11, 2012, by professional interviewers under the supervision of Directions in Research.

The weighting was accomplished in two stages. The final weight from the Pre-election American Values Survey dataset was used as a first-stage weight for the post-election survey to correct for different probabilities of selection and for differential non-response at the time of the first survey. In the second stage, sample demographics were balanced by form to match target population parameters for gender, age, education, race and Hispanic origin, region (U.S. Census definitions), population density, telephone usage and the national presidential vote. The population density parameter was derived from Census 2010 data. The telephone usage parameter came from an analysis of the July-December 2011 National Health Interview Survey. All other weighting parameters were derived from an analysis of the Census Bureau's 2010 Annual Social and Economic Supplement (ASEC) data.

The sample weighting was accomplished using Sample Balancing, a special iterative sample-weighting program that simultaneously balances the distributions of all variables. Weights were trimmed to prevent individual interviews from having too much influence on the final results. The use of these weights in statistical analysis ensures that the demographic characteristics of the sample closely approximate the demographic characteristics of the target populations.

The margin of error is +/- 3.3 percentage points for the general sample at the 95% confidence interval. In addition to sampling error, surveys may also be subject to error or bias due to question wording, context, and order effects.
